On a busy career journey from part-time library assistant, through health services and other employment to the pursuit of a post-graduate return.

Hard labour and juggling

MyCareer
Lis Strachan
Health Services CPD

I was very pleased to see one of our ex-students being profiled in the CILIP Gazette recently (to read the profile from this link go to the penultimate page). Lis Strachan graduated with an MA in Information Management in 2006 and is currently Librarian at the William Harvey Hospital. Lis is honest about the effort involved in balancing academic, work and family commitments but her interview offers some useful advice for anyone thinking of going back to college to improve their professional skills.

Lis is very positive about her experiences as a student at the University of Brighton.

University was a revelation. The next three years were to be inspirational - I found that I loved studying. Whereas the NVQ had been a demonstration of my practical capabilities, working at postgraduate degree level was a more intellectual exercise. The disciplines that were covered were both stimulating and wide-ranging. I was stretched both intellectually and

Table 1.1 Four Tension Points in Tagging Systems

Tension Between...

Personal $\leftrightarrow$ Social	Do people tag primarily for their own benefit? Or are they motivated by the desire to share information with a group, by the desire to be seen as knowledgeable, or by other social factors?
Idiosyncratic $\leftrightarrow$ Standard	Should tags be completely unique and idiosyncratic? Or should they be standardized so that they can be used for browsing and searching?
Freedom $\leftrightarrow$ Control	Does the system give users complete freedom? Or does it influence or control their tags (by offering suggestions, for example)?
Amateur $\leftrightarrow$ Expert	How qualified are the people tagging? Should tags contributed by amateurs count as much as tags created by experts? How do you reconcile popular opinion expressed through tags with expert opinions when they disagree?

Folksonomies

- Bottom-up approach rather than top-down (controlled vocabularies)
- Relationships are inferred from the tags – driven by users rather than classifiers
- Requires scale to work
- Problem of “metacrap”
